DECIME CONTRACT OF DESIGNATION

Honolulu on Way to the Coast.

Lieut. Algernon Barteris, late of the 10th U. S. Infantry, and grandson of U. S. Grant, is a passenger in the Nippon Maru en route home from the Philippines. Lieut Sartoris's resignation from his regiment was recently accepted after many months of hard work in an Mort to get out of the army, and he departed for the United States on the first available steamship, eager to get back into the soclal life he had to give up when he was called, or rather was ordered to the Philippines.

Evidently the martial spirit which was a conspicuous trait in the character of General Ulysses S. Grant, is Freight received at Company's wharf, not one of the heritages of the great general's grandson. Young Sartoris was appointed last May and received his commission in the following June, but long before the year was out he tired of army life and wrote home to his mother and friends that he would prefer a civilian's career. His mother asked him to remain in the army, but the young Lieutenant, so the story went the rounds, pressed upon his family urgent reasons that he have his resignation accepted. He sent the rights as a British subject. His attitude worried his family and friends at home, and the wires between the War Department office at Washington and Manila were kept hot for a while on Sartoris' account. Finally the end came. The army people found that the way Sartoris looked upon the service it would be better that his resignation be accepted, and the young officer was made glad by the receipt of orders to that effect.

"What do you intend doing upon your return to the mainland?" was asked of Lieut. Sartoris aboard the Nippon Maru

"Well, I haven't quite made up my mind yet," replied the ex-officer. "I expect, however, that I shall go into business of some sort. Yes, my resignation was finally accepted, and I am glad to be on my way home. I didn't like army life, especially down in the Philippines. Honolulu seems a beautiful city, and I am now going ashore to drive around a bit and take it in, for this is my first visit to Hawaii."

Young Sartoris is twenty-seven years old and had his first military experience during the Spanish-American war. In the spring of 1898 he was appointed First Lieutenant in the Engineer Corps, and the following spring was made captain in the 3rd U. S. Infantry. After a month's experience he was honorably discharged, chiefly because he had enough of a soldier's life. Afterwards he obtained a position in a Pittsburg bank, but it did not seem to his taste and he left it to again enter military
